SUNDAY AT RYLAND. The Presiding Elder on the Ground-

Prospects of Peace. Ryland Chapel, in South Washington, was the Meeca toward which many a plous Methodist wended his way yesterday, and both morning and evening services were participated in by as large congregations as were ever seen in the church. Dr. Deale officiated in the morning, and at night Rev. B. Peyton Brown, the presiding elder of this District, preached an eloquent and instructive sermon, taking for his text the fifth verse, third chapter of Second Thessalonians: "The Lord direct your paths." Contrary to general expectations, no altusion was made to the existing difficulty in the church, the speaker evidently not caring to han file the subject on Sunday. It was observed yesterday that nearly all the old members of the congregation were in their seats, and the opinion prevailed that in the course of a week the present difficulty could be satisfactorily adjusted. SOME RECOLLECTIONS

OF GENERAL GARFIELD AND OTHERS.

War Times at Chattanooga-The President as General Rosecrans' Chief of Staff-Generals Hazen, McCook, and Others-Interesting Incidents.

Although I did not know President Garfield when he was a farmer lad or a tow-path boy, I did know him when he was General Rosecrans' chief of staff, bearing the rank of majorgeneral, General Rosecrans being then commander $2,000,000 general, General Rosecrans being their communication of the Army of the Cumberland. It was at Chattanooga, about the time of the battle of at that time the wife of an officer and an inmate of the military family of General Wagner, who was B. Wilson, West Virginia; George C. Bates and wife, commandant of the post, I met from time to time many of the officers of the Army of the Cumberland, among them General Alex. McCook, and poor Celonel Dan McCook-God rest his kind soul-Generals Hazen, Willich, and our own Colonel Jack McKibben, and General Garfield, who was introduced to me one evening by General Wagner, I well remember that I had a wheezy plane in my great, carpetless room, which had been brought to The Foreign Mails for the week ending SATUR-DAY, April 9, 1881, will close at this office on TUES-DAY, at 7:30 a. m. for Europe by steamship Arizona via Queenstown; on WEDNESDAY, at 8 a. m., for Europe by steamship Arizona via Queenstown; on WEDNESDAY, at 8 a. m., for Europe by steamship Arizona which he piled the dispatches brought in by the couriers during the night, when he was often permitted to sleep but a few minutes at a time, and that by morning the chair and the floor around it were piled with papers. One day during my stay at the commandant's, I having a little supervision over domestic affairs, had the pleasure of ordering a plate to be laid for General Garfield. An extra plate was the only preparation considered necessary for company then. There was no sound of cake-beating or smell of delicious dainties from the kitchen, nor agitation in the wine cellar, but hard-tack, coffee, brown sugar pork, beans, and potatoes we were always sure of AND GENERALLY FRESH BEEF.

though the latter was considered rather as a luxury than a necessity. When the boys could manage to drive a stray eow into the back yard, and feed her on horse ratious we kept a family cow, and had milk for our cooking and our coffee, which General Wagner drank without thinking but what one of his own cows had been driven down to supply his table with the lacteal fluid; but somebody was sure to leave the gate open every few days, which Bossy invariably took advantage of, not fancying being milked every hour or two by a different person. On the occasion of GENERAL GARFIELD DINING WITH US e had all the luxuries mentioned save milk; our cow having taken French leave we were obliged to drink our coffee black; but we had "sure nough" hot biscuits, and though they were shortbrown specks in them, yet three or four hours of horseback riding every day gave us appetites which more than made up for deficiencies in cooking; and I doubt not General Garfield enjoyed the dinner more than he will many a one in the White House. During the meal he read aloud from a paper containing news to us, though some weeks old, an article going the rounds, called "The House that Jeff Built," which we all enjoyed immensely, partly because it was an emanation of the times and partly because it was read excellently and with such hearty appreciation. Perhaps my reader would ask, Did General Garfield look then as he does now? and I should be obliged to answer no. The years which have stolen the roundness and the roses from my face, and brought to it lines and shadows, have though it will always preserve that strong individuality which makes it eminently a face to itself, separate and distinct from all other faces. Although in perfect health, and living much out of doors General Garfield's face was neither browned nor reddened by exposure, as was every other face belonging to the army. The whiteness of the complexion, together with the peculiarly clearcut features, nature having made in them uncertain nor wavering line, made me think always of General Garfield's as the marble face of the Army of the Cumberland. Not having seen the General from that time until five years ago, I found his complexion had darkened, or taken a more reddish cast, while the accumulation of flesh had, to some extent, marred the firmness and clearness of the outlines of the face-in short, had spoiled, to a certain extent, its statuesqueness, but yet, when the time comes for making a bust of Garfield his face, and head will be found to furnish

AN ESPECIALLY FINE MODEL. Fortunately, President Garfield's war record needs no touching up by me. His record as soldier and statesman having been so amply written of, it and statesman having been so amply written of, it is only mine to tell such little common-places as came to my notice when he was my military neighbor, which happened from General Rosecrans and General Wagner's headquarters begin but a few doors apart. Although at that time I was what is sometimes designated as a "little, plain goose," I recognized General Garfield as a remarkable man among remarkable men. Had I been told that he would one day be President it would not have surprised me greatly; but, as I never expected to hold or to want an office, I should not have seen that a President could be of any possible use to me. I was even pathetically ignorant of the fact that GENERAL HAZEN, NOW CHIEF

General McCook was then considered an excellent and efficient officer, although quite young. I remember once, in riding out along the lines, that we came to in riding out along the lines, that we came to some "boys" who were undergoing punishment by patroling back and forth with rails instead of carbines; the poor fellows had to come to a present arms as we passed with their rails, which produced a most ludicrous effect, although to me it was pathetic as well as ludicrous. General McCook managed to preserve his dignity while passing though I noticed a suspicious twitching about the corners of his mouth, which dispersed into a broad smile and inward laugh when we were fairly past. The McCooks, so far I know them, are

It was a happy thought, the credit of which it is believed to be due to Mr. Charles H. Day, to illustrate the departure of Lalla Rookh from Delhi and to secure the handsomest woman in America to impersonate Tom Moore's immortal heroine. It is stated that the enormous sum of $200,000 has been expended for this moving panorama, in which the beautiful Oriental princess is seen reclining in a sumptuous howdah, borne upon the back of a monster elephant, said to be the largest ever brought to this country, most richly caparisoned, followed by a train of malds of honor upon small Arabian horses and cavaliers in glittering armor, mounted

"Steeds with their housings of rich silver spun,
Their chains and pottrels glittering in the sun:
And camels, tufted o'er with Yemen's shells,
Shaking in every breeze their light-toned bells." Then will follow guards and a gorgeous retinue, which will altogether form a magnificent and picturesque spectacle, such as has never before been witnessed.

The attractions within the canvas will be in pergreatly enlarged over former years by the addition of many rare specimens in the animal kingdom never before imported, notably: Two woolly elephants, twenty performing elephants, performing giraffes, trained to work in harness; the largest living hippopotamus, and many others. The circus entertainment will be given in two rings, with different performances in each, and among the artists may be mentioned the Selbini and Villion troupe of gymnastic bicyclers, Madame Maria Ashby, the dashing bareback equestrienne; Mlle. Victoria, female trapezist; Mlle. Ella Zuila, the female Blondin, and a host of the most celebrated members of the arenic profession. THE TWO BENEFITS.

Washington is essentially a circus town, wisely determined to refrain from competing with Forepaugh's great show, and so there will not be performances at either place during the Joseph Graves, charged with keeping early part of the week. On Wednesday night the opera of "The Pirates of Penzance" will be given by our popular amateurs for the equally popular manager of the popular National Theatre. On the following night, Thursday, "Olivette," which has been so successful during the past season, will be presented at Ford's Opera-House on the occasion of the first benefit in this city of Mr. J. Pennsylvania Republicans. The reception committee of the Pennsylvania Republican Association met at their headquarters, 405 Eleventh street northwest, on Friday evening, 1st instant, and wound up their duties which devolved upon the committee and its officers were well and faithfully performed. A new organization of a permanent nature was then formed, to be known as "The Pennsylvania Republican Club of Washington, D. C." The following officers were elected: President, Mr. J. J. Brooks; first vice-president, S. M. Marsh; second vice-president, Richard B. Smith; recording secretary, J. F. Linden; financial secretary, J. Howard Bushnell; treasurer, Daniel Collins; chairman board of directors, W. G. Russell; fourteen other directors were elected. By-laws were adopted, initiation fee and dues decided upon. The club is to be formed of Pennsylvania Republican voters; rooms are to be secured and kept open daily for the use of their members and friends, and Pennsylvanians visiting Washington can at any time ascertain any information they may require by applying there. The action of Mr. W. G. Russell in representing the State of Pennsylvania at the Central Republican Association meeting, together with Messrs, Molder and Linden, was approved, and the same delegates were appointed to represent the State of Pennsylvania at all future meetings.

Union Veteran Corps. At the last meeting of this "veteran" corps a committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements for a series of entertainments, the proceeds to be devoted to the benefit of the uniform fund of the corps. By the way of introducing the company socially, the committee have completed arrangements for a complimentary friends, on the 28th instant, at Marini's Hall. From the good standing of the members of the committee it is a well-assured fact that no pains will be spared by them to make the first recention of the Union Veteran Corps unsurpassed by any similar affair during the past fall or winter. It is expected that many distinguished Government officials will honor the "Vets" with their presence on this occasion. The young folks should keep this date in v.ew.

Talking to Sunday-School Children. At the North Baptist Church last night, Professor Cleveland Abbe delivered an interesting address on the "Secret of Success" in Sundayschool teaching. This secret lay in the teacher's devotion to his work, in his feeling a warm personal interest in it; in zealous prayer for the welfare of his scholars, and in efforts to make them feel at home in the Sunday-school. Following him, Dr. Foster illustrated with diagrams on the blackboard the lesson of "The Good Samaritan." and the children responded to his questions with a degree of quick intelligence which spoke volumes for the efforts of their teachers and for their own interest in the lesson. Professor Otis T. Mason concluded the exercises with an interesting ad-

One of the main features of the meeting was the presence on the platform of the members of the Royal Templars of Temperance. An effort was made to clear off the Dashaway indebtedness, and a collection and subscription amounting to about $75 was raised. Addresses were made by Brother T. J. Bradley, of the Royal Templars, and Hon. C. C. Mills, of New York.

MEDICAL CHARLATANS.

How to Get Rid of Quacks-Views of

The State of Illinois found a remedy for the expulsion of medical charlatans from her tents were pitched and so many were required | borders, and any other State, Territory, or municipality can do likewise; but, if the people can en vicinity of Ninth and S streets. It is to be hoped | dure them, the medical profession, as such, will probably not complain. When they get in the way so that there may be no interruption to the street | they are generally knocked down, a la Health Officer, and there is an end of it. The public never did and never will fully appreciate the medical profession. Its members do not expect it. The true physician has the welfare of his patients at heart, and often labors for them with no expectation of reward, while the quack is ever on the qua vive for his patient's dollar solely. But, as bad as the quack doctors are, they do answer a good purpose sometimes. There are many clever people who never pay the physician anything if avoidable. The doctors soon find them out, and it is not long before they are deprived of their advice.

THEY THEN ENCOUNTER THE QUACKS. who, while working for reputation and notoriety practice upon them. Then there are those who prefer the services of charlatans, and for many reasons contact with such is distasteful to the physician. By contrast we judge of most men and physician. By contrast we judge of most men and things. If we were all good, goodness would lose its present market value. There was a time when the sportsman thought he had in the laminated steel-barreled, muzzle-loading shot-gun of Greener, Scott, Moore, and other celebrated English makers all that could be desired in a gun; but lo! inventive genius has evolved the breech-loader, and the former is among the things that were. The same may be said of the old key-winding watch and the modern stem-winder, of the old-fashioned stage and our Pullman palace, of the barges of feet keeping with the extensive street display, and washington Gaslight Company's stuff and elecwill fully maintain the high reputation that Mr.

anæsthesia, sulphate of quinia, carbolic acid, the hypodermic syringe, or a thousand other remedies and appliances so useful to us? Has he overmade one surgical instrument that supplied a needed want? You may safely say no; and, if he had, he would have patented his discovery and made suffering humanity pay handsomely for his knowledge. So all the material advances and discoveries in the science of medicine and surgery have been made by members of the profession, and not by quacks. Theoretically, medicine is popularly given the second place among sacred vocations, the first being allotted to the clergy; but, practi-cally and collectively, I say, in comparison, that medicine is the most responsible, and what is most responsible and vital is the most sacred. Medicine should not be measured by mean but proposely on should not be measured by men, but properly es-teemed; and those deficient in the requirements of what a docter should be will be repudiated by of what a docter should be will be reputified by the profession, who are the only proper judges of physicians. If any of these quacks could accom-plish one thousandth part of what they say they do the public would not be long in making more brass horses for city ornamentation. Iowa Circle is probably the handsomest in Washington, and I firmly believe that the United States would not deny to any man or woman who discovers A REMEDY FOR CONSUMPTION reproduction of their outlines in gold, mounted on a magnificent pedestal of bronze therein, as a feeble testimonial of gratitude for services ren-dered. The Star said there is nothing sacred about the practice of medicine. The people know there ought to be, and our confidence is the least shaken those men who live up to and inculcate by their daily example a lofty individual morality, regard-less of their vocation. To hold in the hollow of one's hand the lives of hundreds of persons is a sacred trust, the Star to the contrary, and honor and distinction should be accredited to whomsoever properly discharges his duties under such re-sponsibility. What would be thought of a railroad company employing inefficient locomotive en-gineers? or a ferry company placing inexperienced pilots at their wheels? And yet our law-givers suffer the weak, the poor, the sick to be maimed and destroyed involuntarily by MEN AND WOMEN PRETENDING class legislation to require a pilot to discern a red light from a blue one? If so, why? To prevent a some future time the destruction of human life which might occur were he color-blind. Then there ought to be some legislation that would require a physician to discern measles from small-pox, for a color-bilind quack can destroy about as many lives as a similarly possessed pilot; the only difference being that he runs them under one at a time. The physician, pilot, locomotive-engineer, et id onne genus, should be protected in their vocations from the encroachments of charlatans, not so much for their own benefit as for the publi welfare. "The Republican" and Public Morals. To the Editor of The Republican : Although I do not propose at this time to follow the example of Mr. Daish and have THE REPUBLICAN discontinued, still I have been greatly pained and shocked during the last week to see so much space, for three or four days, devoted to a description of the death and burial of a noted prostitute. All parents will agree that that is not the kind of literature they want placed before the eyes of their children. Why does not THE REPUB-LICAN espouse the cause of our young people, and withhold from its columns all that is pernicious to their morals? Has it never occurred to you, Mr. Editor, that it is possible to furnish your readers with too much news, and "all for three cents?" Regretting the necessity for this remonstrance, I [We have the utmost respect and regard for ou fair correspondent and the views which she pre sents; but, as the publishers of a live newspaper at the National Capital, we believe that it is our duty to give, as nearly as possible, a daily photograph of the incidents and events which take place within our sphere. To the Editor of The Republican: DEAR SIR: Letters of inquiry from school officials in all sections of the country indicate a general attendance of the children of the public and private schools at my great exhibition the coming season. Since consolidating with the Great London Show my collection of rare wild beasts affords reception and soirce to its honorary members and the most comprehensive and instructive study of the animal kingdom of any menagerie in the world. That the orphans may not be denied these valuable lessons in natural history, I cordially invite the inmates of the various orphan asylums, Protestant and Catholic, as well as the unfortunate Protestant and Catholic, as well as the unfortunates of all the charitable institutions of Washington, to attend, free of charge, during our visit here, April 18 and 19. It is expected the children will attend in a body, accompanied by their teachers. I shall be present, and it will afford me pleasure to address the visitors. The public's obedient servant. P. T.
